DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 2-13 are allowed.
2. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: Applicant teaches a method for simulating a dynamic run-time user interaction with a voice application, said method comprising the steps of: loading a user simulation script programmed to specify simulated voice interactions with the voice application; deriving from the voice application a nominal output; generating a simulated output for the voice application corresponding to the nominal output; generating a first simulated input for the voice application corresponding to a first pre-determined user input to the voice application, if the nominal output satisfies a first condition; and generating a second simulated input for the voice application corresponding to a second pre-determined user input to the voice application, if the nominal output satisfies a second condition different from the first condition. Applicant's arguments that the claimed combination of features is not taught by the prior art of record is convincing. Applicant's argument that, "As claimed, the voice application simulation method includes the steps of "generating a first simulated input for the voice application corresponding to a first pre-determined user input to the voice application, if the nominal output satisfies a first condition", and "generating a second simulated input for the voice application corresponding to a second pre-determined user input to the voice application, if the nominal output satisfies a second condition different from the first condition". The cited passages of Starkie at paragraphs 0041-0051 fail to teach or suggest a voice application simulation method that includes these two steps. For example, the cited passage of Starkie at paragraph 0053 teaches "the scenario generator 206 randomly selects a grammar fragment that has not been considered in that dialog state, i.e., a fragment that is not represented in the first list with a non-zero count value. At step 508, a phrase is randomly generated using the selected grammar fragment and is passed to the simulator 208." Accordingly, the scenario generator 206 of Starkie does NOT "generat(e) a first simulated input for the voice application corresponding to a first pre-determined user input to the voice application, if the nominal output satisfies a first condition. Nor does Starkie generat(e) a second simulated input for the voice application corresponding to a second pre-determined user input to the voice application, if the nominal output satisfies a second condition different from the first condition." , is convincing. The cited prior art alone or in combination fails to teach the claimed combination of features.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Starkie (US 2006/0203980 A1).

As per claim 1, Starkie teaches a voice application simulation method comprising the steps of:

loading a user simulation script programmed to specify simulated voice interactions with the voice application (0029, 0041-0051);

deriving from the voice application a nominal output; generating a simulated output for the voice application corresponding to the nominal output (0029, 0041-0051); and conditionally producing a varying simulated input for the voice application (0029, 0041-0052).

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments filed 11/23/2007 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant's arguments do not comply with 37 CFR 1.111(c) because they do not clearly point out the patentable novelty which he or she thinks the claims present in view of the state of the art disclosed by the references cited or the objections made. Further, they do not show how the amendments avoid such references or objections.

Conclusion

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
